

Quality awards go to area recipients

From staff reports

Five out of 10 recipients of the 2005 Minnesota Quality Award are school districts and health care systems in southeastern Minnesota.

The winners are: Kasson-Mantorville public schools, Mayo Health System, Rochester Catholic Schools, Rochester public schools and Winona Health.

Given by the nonprofit Minnesota Council for Quality, the awards recognize organizations that continually strive for excellence and improvement and use the Malcolm Baldrige system of quality assessment and continuous improvement.

The award winners will be recognized during the council's 15th annual event May 9 in Bloomington, Minn.

To be eligible for the award, organizations must complete a lengthy and detailed application, explaining the processes and procedures for ensuring quality and continuous improvement. In addition, the Minnesota Council for Quality sends evaluators to make site visits.

The other five winners of the Minnesota Quality Award are: Allina Hospitals and Clinics of Minneapolis; Benedictine Health System of Duluth; Central Minnesota Jobs and Training Services of Monticello; Immanuel St. Joseph's of Mankato, which is part of Mayo Health System; and Sunny Fresh Foods, a Cargill company in Monticello.
